

BPL to Reach $2.5 Billion

Reprint from BPL Today

That's by 2009, The Shpigler Group put the world BPL market, despite stiff competition, domination of the broadband industry by cable TV and local telecom and the frequent arrival of new suppliers. David Shpigler founded the firm in Nyack, NY. He cited technological advances in the last few years giving BPL the ability to compete. The long-term outlook is about 14 million customers in the U.S. in 10 years, he predicted. The report explores whether and how viable a business strategy can be and draws on The Shpigler Group's extensive background within the telecom and utility industries. It's called Developments in Broadband over Power Lines and is available from KMI Research in Providence, RI (www.kmiresearch.com).
